Baseball terminology

This reference uses the recorded Betify Betting Rules 2.0. Glossary definitions assist reading; the following specific clauses control settlement.

Term	Meaning
At bat	An official batting turn excluding walk, hit-by-pitch or sacrifice.
Double-header	Two games between the same teams on one day, each a separate event.
Extra innings / inning	Tie-breaking play after the usual nine innings / away batting in the top half and home batting in the bottom.
Mercy rule	An official early end after a prescribed run lead and innings threshold.
Money line / run line	Outright match winner, usually offered including extra innings / baseball handicap, usually ±1.5 runs.
Pitcher strikeout (K)	Three strikes against a batter producing an out.
RBI	A batter's action, such as hit or sacrifice, causes a run.
Shortened format	Fewer than nine innings, such as seven, announced officially before play.

Term	Meaning
Starting pitcher	The pitcher throwing their team's first pitch; named-pitcher action requires this start.
Total bases	Hit bases only: single one, double two, triple three, home run four; walks, hit-by-pitch and errors excluded.

Minimum play and scheduled format

Default regular time is nine innings, or 8.5 with the home team leading, unless the market says otherwise. Many Money Line, Run Line and Total Runs markets expressly include extra innings. Full-game markets other than Winner require nine/8.5. A pre-announced seven-inning format makes seven/6.5 the relevant full-game minimum.

An official mercy-rule finish counts as complete for Money Line, Run Line and Totals at the invoked score, if the authority treats the game as official. Unplayed inning-specific bets, such as eighth-inning winner or ninth-inning total, void. Naturally concluded markets remain settled, for example first-inning winner or over 5.5 runs at 7–0. Pre-match Winner has a separate minimum of five innings, or 4.5 when home leads; a later stop uses the score when stopped.

Scheduling, interruption and source data

A game not starting on its official venue-local calendar date voids all event bets. An already started game resuming within 48 hours of its original scheduled start preserves bets until completion. Beyond 48 hours, unresolved outcomes void unless they qualify under the official-game Winner rule. Each double-header game is separate; a postponed game moved into a later-day double-header voids the original bets rather than transferring them to either new game. Abandonment below the official minimum follows the same resumption window and natural-conclusion exception.

Wrong score, inning/outs status or odds based on incorrect match time may void bets. TV and official association statistics, such as MLB.com, settle unless clearly incorrect.

Baseball player props

Official league box scores govern, with extra innings included unless stated otherwise. The player must be in the starting lineup and participate; otherwise bets void. A named-pitcher market, such as total strikeouts, additionally needs that pitcher to start and throw their team’s first official pitch. Participating-player props stand after abandonment if the game is official under rule 6.3 or naturally concluded; before official status unresolved props void. The separately recorded 6.8.4 says pending props void if a cancelled, abandoned or postponed game does not resume within 48 hours, except already fixed outcomes. These clauses retain their respective scopes.

Target 1+/2+/3+ wins on reaching or exceeding the target, such as batter two-plus hits. Whole-number equality refunds over/under. Hits are singles+doubles+triples+home runs, excluding walks (BB), hit-by-pitch (HBP), errors and fielder’s choice. Home Runs is the individual home-run count; Pitcher Strikeouts is batters struck out (K). Total Bases weights singles one, doubles two, triples three and home runs four. Runs + RBI adds runs scored and batted in. Hits Allowed is hits conceded while the named pitcher is active. Player Performance Double requires ten-plus in two statistical categories or the specific double achievement named by the market.
