Using the editorial reference

Tower Rush India • https://towerrushindi.com/en/terms/

What the publisher provides

Tower Rush India publishes editorial information about Tower Rush. It neither accepts bets nor maintains game wallets. Galaxsys is the game developer; an operator manages its own casino account and services. The publisher, game provider and casino operator are separate roles.

Access and audience

The reference is intended for an 18+ audience. An age notice on an editorial page does not replace documentary verification by an operator. There is no reader account for this editorial website: casino registration does not create a towerrushindi.com login. Published user comments, a moderation journal, a newsletter and an AI assistant are not part of the defined editorial service.

Content and brand rights

Original editorial text remains the property of its rights holder. Third-party logos do not become editorial property. Tower Rush, Galaxsys and the named casino brands are the designations of their respective rights holders. Their editorial mention does not make this an official provider or casino website.

Enquiries and claims

An editorial complaint belongs to the editorial contact or the relevant page’s enquiry form: editorial@towerrushindi.com. A claim about a casino’s financial operation belongs to the operator. The editorial form collects name, email, subject and message, with an optional page link; it does not collect passwords or payment documents. A separate consent covers processing the enquiry rather than automatically subscribing the sender to marketing.

The enquiry retention period is 90 calendar days after closure. Delivery/error logs last 14 days from the event and backups follow a 30-day rotation. The detailed allocation of data and the different starting events are set out in S03-privacy.pdf. The affiliate calculation is separate from operator balances and is described in S05-affiliate-disclosure.pdf.